Self-Help Repossession

- Creditor or creditor’s agent takes the car
  - Requirements
    - Valid Security Interest in the Vehicle
    - Default
    - Acceleration
    - Must Not Breach the Peace
  - Law enforcement not involved
Self-Help Repossession
An Anomaly

• Policy Generally Disfavors Self-help

• Historical Reasons

• Time to take another look…

LEGALITY OF THE PROCESS

- US Supreme Court Rulings
- Appellate and State Court Rulings
- Uniform Commercial Code (UCC) Language
SELF-HELP COLLATERAL RECOVERY PROCESS AS A PUBLIC SAFETY ISSUE

- Including all types of repossessions….over 3 million per year.
- “Inherent” Risks
- Sub-Prime….Loose Credit Requirements.
- Proliferation of untrained, uninsured, improperly insured, criminal element into the industry.
- No cost effective method for lending community to select certified collateral recovery professionals. RISC working on a procedure.
- State regulatory oversight by only Florida, California, Louisiana and City of Chicago.
SOLUTIONS

Legal process for all repossession activity.

- Would overwhelm court system and law enforcement.
- Also result in stricter credit requirements which would punish consumers most in need of financing services.
- Would punish an entire profession for the acts of a few.
- Example; over 3 million repossessions....54 serious incidents
- Bernie Madoff actions devastated thousands, mostly senior consumers.
Minimal, Sensible, Effective state regulatory oversight of licensing and activities.

- Only 3 states, Florida, California, Louisiana, and City of Chicago have specific law governing licensing and activities.
- Our national organization, RISC, has developed a Legislative Template.
- Being considered in South Carolina presently.
- Currently working with collateral recovery professional in Michigan, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Indiana, Georgia and Alabama.
- Difficulty of legislative process.
Questions
New Technology in Repossession

• Electronic repossession
  – Disabling
  – GPS tracking
  – Buzzers, Horns

• Concerns
  – Placing people in dangerous situations
  – Unfair leverage over consumer
  – Privacy
  – Damage to vehicle after disabled
New Technology in Repossession

• License Plate Scanners
  – Used by military, law-enforcement, toll booths, now repo agents
  – Fixed and mobile cameras
  – Data used in immediately and can be stored for future use

Locations of Violent or Traumatic Repossession Incidents
since Jan. 1, 2007; including incidents that resulted in deaths, injuries, violence or the taking of small children.

(see p. 21, Appendix for descriptions.)
APPENDIX I

This chart was compiled from a survey of reports by newspapers and television stations that described repossessions incidents since Jan. 1, 2007. The chart lists and summarizes those incidents that, according to a news report, resulted in death, injury or the arrest of someone involved or a bystander. It also lists and summarizes incidents in which a child under the age of 9 was taken. In some cases, the reports were supplemented by a review of court records.

NATIONAL CONSUMER LAW CENTER
“It was exactly like a car-jacking.”
--Sara Bradley, describing the self-help repossession of her car.
A police dispatcher inquiring about the status of caller’s car payments “was reasonable and often anticipated when a caller tells emergency personnel that his car has been or is being towed.” -- Judge Alexander Williams, U.S. District Court for the District of Maryland
He was "killed over a durn car."
-- James Lovette, Choctaw County Sheriff
“The trucks simply need to roll more hours, and pick up more units . . . Each of you have the ability to do WHATEVER it takes to pick up more cars.”
-- Renovo Regional Manager
Self-help repossession is legal in all 50 states.
In 33 out of the 50 states, no special license is required to carry out a self-help repossession.
All 50 states have summary process, a judicial procedure, for evictions.
Fundamental Protection

- Prohibit repossession undertaken without court order.
- Only trained law enforcement carry out authorized repossession.
Agenda for Reform

1. A requirement that an automobile owner receive formal notice of a lender’s claim that a default has occurred, and have the right and opportunity to dispute that claim.
2. A requirement that whenever a repossession is authorized by a court or initiated by a creditor, an automobile owner receive a written notice that includes a description of the times, places and conditions under which the repossession may occur.
Agenda for Reform

3. A requirement that a lender provide a car owner the right, for a set period, to cure a loan default by making any missed payments and paying reasonable late fees, and that the lender notify the owner of this right.
Agenda for Reform

4. A rule making it clear that a prohibition on the breach of peace in a repossession requires that a repossession agent immediately discontinue the seizure whenever the car owner objects in any way.
Agenda for Reform

5. Prohibition of a creditor’s right to sell or dispose of a seized car until the passage of a set period (such as 15 to 20 days) during which the owner of the car has right to reinstate a loan and regain possession of the car by making late payments and paying reasonable late fees and repossession costs.
Agenda for Reform

6. Strict licensing and bonding requirements for any private individuals who carry out repossessions, including a prohibition of repossessions by individuals with histories of serious criminal offenses or violence.
Agenda for Reform

7. Clear liability by creditors for any bad acts by repossessors they have dispatched or engaged.

Automatic License Plate Recognition: Privacy Concerns

Jay Stanley
Speech, Privacy and Technology Program
jstanley@aclu.org

Part I: Context
From Old Technology to New

- Biometrics
- RFID tags
- Internet tracking
- GPS
- DNA
- Video surveillance
Video surveillance

- Cameras everywhere
- Government networks
- Aerial surveillance
- Non-visual: thermal, infrared, etc
- Video analytics
  - Face Recognition
  - License Plate Recognition
Other factors at work

• Moore’s law = more powerful privacy-challenging technology
• Powerful national security state
• A “Surveillance Industrial Complex”
To conserve the privacy we’ve always had, we must act
The courts aren’t keeping up:

- Olmstead v. U.S.: 1928
  = 39 years
Part II: License-plate Scanners
ALPR Technology

1. Picture of license plate
2. Optical character recognition
3. Database lookup
Uses...

- Unpaid and fines
- Patrol cars
- Town entrances
ACLU position

Legitimate when narrowly used but don’t like:

- Lack of standards & controls on use
- Mission creep
- Systematic tracking
- Sharing of data
- Combination with other surveillance
Automatic Number / Licence Plate Recognition (ANPR) - applications

ANPR APPLICATION AREAS

There are application areas over a very broad range of end users and the need for automatic number plate recognition (ANPR) systems are often driven by:

- Convenience - e.g. support of customer values, disabled drivers, prestigious customers, selected personnel etc.
- Cost/Manpower Savings - e.g. substantial reduction in manpower and guarding costs.
- Fraud Prevention - e.g. can eliminate fraud for car parking fees etc.
- Security - e.g. vehicle theft, auto vehicle movement logging, rapid search and find facilities
- Marketing Applications - e.g. traffic flow, visitor demographic information etc. for retail complexes.

Once the number plate has been successfully 'captured' applications for its use are limited only by imagination and almost anything is possible.

A customer's own database can be used for example to achieve specific and tailored results. Local authorities for instance already have databases which could allow disabled drivers easy access to car parks without the great inconvenience often experienced with traditional entry systems.

Customer profiling and habits for marketing purposes knows no bounds and the Westminster Sentinel NPR system can provide an information source on customer demographics which is not available by other means.
New York’s “Ring of Steel”

- Link thousands of police, private cameras
- Combine with license plate readers, central monitoring, Face recognition
- Access-control gates
No privacy in public?

- “Being in public” is not a binary yes/no state
- Katz decision on phone booth
- There are always gradations of privacy even in public
Inevitable?
No.
Technology can be channeled by policy

- Automobiles heavily regulated
- Surveillance cameras don’t have microphones – because of wiretapping laws
