WHY?

• Why does USDA have rural housing programs?
• What about HUD?
“Rural” can be defined many different ways.

Census defines rural as under 2,500 population. Over half the people in these rural areas live within metro areas (in outer counties).

USDA defines rural as by several factors including population:
- Under 20,000 in nonmetro places
- Under 10,000 in metro areas
- Under 35,000 (formerly 25,000) if eligible at one time and the population grew

Many Native American and Native Alaskan lands are considered rural.
POOREST OF THE POOR

- 363 nonmetro counties have had 20%+ poverty rates since 1960.
- Of the 200 highest poverty counties in the U.S., 192 are rural.
Persistent Poverty in the United States, 1980 - 2009

USDA has extensive programs for rural housing:
- single-family homeownership
- multifamily rentals
- home repair
- other

Farmworker housing program and repair grants for elderly homeowners are the only programs for specific populations – others are eligible based on income and location.

USDA has funded over 400,000 apartments and 2.1 million homeownership units.
