The Honorable Harry Reid
The Capitol, S-221
Washington, DC 20050

Dear Senator Reid:

As members of Americans for Financial Reform, a coalition of more than 250 consumer, labor, investor, community, civil rights and business groups, we write to you today to convey our support for strong financial reform legislation that will prevent another financial crisis, end the casino economy, and hold big Wall Street banks accountable.

It has been nearly two years since American taxpayers were forced to bail out the big banks, whose reckless gambling brought them to the brink of ruin and almost took down the world financial system. It is time for the Senate to act, and we applaud you for bringing financial reform legislation to the floor that provides a framework for putting our financial system back to work for Main Street. We are urging Senators to support and strengthen this legislation, and to stand firm in your commitment to making the changes that our families and our economy need.

Consumer Financial Protection
Consumers need a strong, independent Consumer Financial Protection Agency with the reach and enforcement authority over banks and non-banks to end abusive practices that harm individual consumers and can damage the stability of our financial system. We will oppose any efforts to weaken the consumer agency or add carve-outs by car dealers, payday lenders or any other industry, and we will support needed improvements to its independence and enforcement scope. Preserving state ability to enact and state attorney general ability to enforce the laws is critically important.

We are also particularly concerned that the regulators who failed to protect consumers in the past must not be given veto authority over the agency's decisions. The appeal to any systemic risk council should be removed entirely; further, we oppose allowing the standard of its decision making to be lowered from systemic risk or lowering its decision-making threshold to simple majority. These weakening changes could destroy the effectiveness of the agency.

Derivatives
Regulation of the derivatives markets that requires clearing and exchange trading, with any exceptions sharply limited and narrowly defined so that they cannot undermine the purposes of the regulation, is vital to the safety of our financial system. The legislation reported out by the Agriculture Committee forms a good basis for this system. We will strongly oppose what we expect will be forceful efforts to weaken it, and we will support changes that ensure that all loopholes are closed, and that good laws can be effectively enforced. An unregulated derivatives market was a central cause of the financial crisis; regulation will be a sham if loopholes undercut it.

Hedge Funds and Private Equity

Other pieces of the shadow market must also be brought into the light of day. The legislation currently includes new regulation for hedge funds, but exempts private equity and venture capital. We believe that these must be included as well. Private equity investment strategies can cause a systemic threat to the economy because the increased debt held on a company's balance sheet could cause company instability and subsequent default. Defaults would result in enormous losses to banks and investors, and job losses for many of the millions of Americans currently employed by private-equity owned firms. At minimum, regulators should oversee hedge funds, private equity and venture capital and should be given authority to require these funds to make disclosures to investors and creditors as was recommended by President Obama last summer.

Resolution Authority/Systemic Risk

AFR believes that in order to prevent future crises and bailouts, and end the “heads we win, tails you lose” gambling that caused the most recent financial crisis, we must both prevent excessive risk taking and speculation, and have in place an orderly system for liquidating failed institutions. We therefore support the bill's approach to extending prudential regulation over shadow markets and expanding resolution authority.

However, regulator deference did not prevent the last crisis. We are calling for structural changes written into law, such as a statutory leverage limit and a size cap on financial institutions as proposed in the Brown-Kaufman-Casey-Whitehouse proposal. We believe that 'Volcker rule' limits on proprietary trading and other risky behavior are essential to meet the test of true reform, and must be strengthened as in the Merkley-Levin amendment, and not negotiated away. We are seeking bans on hedging practices that enrich Wall Street insiders at the expense of shareholders (as in the Menendez executive stock hedging amendment) and clients (as in the Merkley-Levin "Goldman" securitization conflict amendment).

In the liquidation process, we believe that risky financial institutions should pay in advance, and support matching the House's $150 billion fund. We support the payment of wages as a priority in settling the claims of unsecured creditors. Finally, to protect taxpayers in liquidation and enforce market discipline, we believe that secured creditors must be exposed to haircuts and derivatives counterparties not given safe harbor.

Credit Rating Agencies

The failure of the major credit rating agencies to accurately assess the quality of financial products featured prominently in the systemic breakdown that produced the current crisis. Credit rating agencies are subject to weak regulatory oversight and minimal standards of liability. Critically, the conflicts of interest inherent in the "issuer pays" business model have corrupted the rating agencies’ fundamental mission of analyzing risk. The new standards in the legislation, including increased liability and SEC authority, and reduced reliance on ratings on a case by case basis, must be preserved. We support stronger measures to put credit rating agencies and issuers at arm’s length, require post-rating surveillance of securities, and increase credit rating agency accountability.

Investor Protections
Protects for average investors have suffered years of neglect, leaving investors with inadequate disclosures regarding the investments they purchase and inadequate protections in their dealings with investment professionals. The bill contains important new protections, but it is missing a vital element – the imposition of a fiduciary duty on all those who provide investment advice to act in the best interests of their clients. We support inclusion of this duty in the final bill. We also support restoring private civil liability against aiders and abettors of securities fraud.

Corporate Governance
The corporate governance reforms in this legislation, including say on pay and proxy access, will help hold corporations and their CEO’s accountable for risky decisions that fatten their paychecks, but leave millions of Americans jobs and savings at risk. They must remain part of the final bill.

Once again, we thank you, and the entire Senate, for your work on this bill. We ask you to stand firmly with Main Street, and not be swayed by Wall Street pressure, and we look forward to working with you to strengthen and win passage of this fundamentally important legislation.

Sincerely,

Executive Committee of Americans for Financial Reform
