Hurricanes, wildfires and other natural disasters devastate communities and threaten the financial well-being of residents. The National Consumer Law Center (NCLC) works at the national and state levels to develop innovative policy solutions, train and support local advocates, and educate consumers about their financial options. After the 2017 hurricanes and wildfires that tore apart communities in Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Texas, Florida, California and elsewhere, NCLC launched its Disaster Relief and Consumer Protection project. NCLC’s leadership is helping communities deal with the financial devastation of natural disasters while building a network of advocates in affected areas who can share information and learn from one another.
